Deliver Tobacco
to Pool Stations

Stemming stock grown in Rock county will be ordered in at the receiving stations in an increased amount during the last week, according to Eber Arthur, manager for the N. W. Co., T. D. A. The sorting stock in the southern section is moving slowly.

Sampling work has been delayed by the weather conditions, the tobacco being received by County Agent R. T. Glasco from rural boys and girls for the Rock county junior clubs. The most popular club appears to be the new pig club with the dairy club a close second.

Applications for the scores are being received by County Agent R. T. Glasco from rural boys and girls for the Rock county junior clubs. The most popular club appears to be the new pig club with the dairy club a close second.

Applications must be sent in early for the "pool" club, according to Russell Clark, club leader. Good registered ewes have been located which can be purchased for the boys and girls for sums from $20 to $25.

Information furnished from Madison indicates that considerable of the tobacco pooled has been sold. Good grades are being sent in.

Interest is being taken by all those connected with the tobacco trade in the decision to be made in the test case now before the Dane county circuit court whether the pool contract can be upheld.

With regulation form, given by their victory last Saturday night over the Pigeon River Cats here of 34 to 30, the Janeville Black Cats are ready to take on the Brooklyn Tigers on Wednesday night. The game starts at 8:15. It is the first of the season to be played on Wednesday, a change made with hopes of giving fans a better chance to attend.

The Felines are out to turn the tables on the Pigeons, the Tigers. The 19 to 1 victory taken by Brooklyn on the Green county floor a few weeks ago gives an edge to the contest.

Janeville will again be without the services of the flashy Kukuske. "Butch" is still confined to his home with a poisoned leg.

Nott Drops Down on Elimination; Bolt Interferes

After hitting 11 straight bull's eyes Albert Nott, member of the Janeville Billiards club tied with three others with "possible" scores in the National Billiards association's prone match at 50 feet, was forced to halt in the shooting Tuesday afternoon. The rules of the special match were that he was to continue shooting until he had made less than 10. He was to have shot at 20 targets, making 200 rounds.

Nott, who had practiced faithfully for the match, was knocked off his chances when he used a straight rifle. When he won his title, he used a rifle with iron sights. Tuesday, in order to make more certain of his opportunities, he shifted to one with telescope sights, a rifle in which the firing bolt was a trifle larger than in his own. By that bolt gunning his nose on his 12th shot, his gun was knocked just a trifle into the "frog's place" and he missed by a "frog's eye."

However, Nott will still be at least fourth in the national match. Because he used iron sights in the regulation tournament, he stands a good chance of getting first place for iron sights.

Work Progressing on Meet Building; Bowlers to Gather

While bowlers of Janeville, and others are interested in putting over the 1928 Wisconsin state pin meet, which comes to this city in April, the work is progressing on the new building of Gruber, Newman on West Milwaukee street. It is taken for granted that G. & N. will be designated as the place for the meet.

Remodeling of the structure was stopped for several days while the state building department debated whether to permit a new inside staircase to be located at the front end of the street door. This matter, however, was finally arranged and work is to proceed in placing a new and more modern front on the store part of the three-story structure.

The alleys will not be installed for some time yet.

Thursday night at 8 p. m. all persons of the city are invited to boost to make the tourney here go over the top, and invited to attend a special meeting at the Chamber of Commerce. Nomination of a Janeville man for the position of president and also another for state treasurer, the Wisconsin Bowlers association will be made by those in attendance. Thursday night, at the same time, the first steps in the formation of the Janeville Tournament association will be taken.

Grant Women Outroll Men

QUIET CELEBRATION OF THIS BIRTHDAY

Public Offices to Be Closed and Schools Give Programs Thursday.

Washington's birthday will have a general observance here, although celebration of the birthday of the Father of His Country for several past years has decreased, until now the day is remembered from the man he shaped, account of Washington and his famous meetings, rather than making it a holiday. The plan of closing the schools was even dropped last year, and this year will see the schools running almost as usual on Thursday.

City hall and county-house officials and employees of Janesville's four banks will have a holiday, while the Janesville Public Library, after closing Wednesday night, will not open its doors again until Friday morning.

P. O. Take a Day Off.

Practically all the postoffice workers will have the day off. There are to be no deliveries of mail, either in the city or rural districts, will be open only from 8 to 9 a. m. to receive mail. No shipments will be made and incoming mail will be left unsorted until the following day.

Schools, while not celebrating the day with much time off, will have special exercises in honor of the occasion, and the church, town and other events in the life of the first president will be given at exercises. All schools will let out before three o'clock, because of the day and because of the movie picture, "Over the Hill" to be shown at the new high school auditorium at three o'clock.

Admission for the afternoon performances, to last two hours, will be 15 and 25 cents, and the public is invited. The picture, one of the great successes of several past years, will be again screened at 7:15, for 25 and 35 cents, the latter price for adults, and it is hoped to have a large audience, as money raised will help buy a motion picture machine.

Students of Columbus have their regular meeting Thursday night, and will commemorate Washington in the program, with some special talks.

Gideons Propose Memorial Room at Local Y.M.C.A.

Possibilities that a permanent memorial may be made out of the Y.M.C.A. conference room, where the international order of Gideons was first established, are strong, according to a letter received by J. A. Stetler, secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. who writes to the national secretary of the national Gideon Society. He says the Gideons want to immortalize this room, now used for conferences and committee meetings, and would redecorate the walls and put some sort of tablet up. It would not spoil the room for use by the association. The matter will be taken up at the coming national meeting in Milwaukee in March.

Junior Club Work Boosted in Newark

A successful community meeting in the interest of boys and girls agricultural club work was held at the home of Wilbur Kelly in Newark Tuesday night, under auspices of the Newark Y. M. C. A. The principal address was by W. A. McNeil, Madison, who explained the various projects and in the development of the work. Donald Carson told of his experience as a member of the calf club, and Claude Sprague told how he won the Beloit division championship with his acre of corn last year. The Y. M. C. A. orchestra furnished music. The Newark group is one of the liveliest organizations in the county Y. M. C. A. and has undertaken the promotion of the club work as a special project. Walter Junker is president and Roy Cole is leader of the group.

NEW PRIEST WILL ADDRESS WOMEN'S CLUB ON MONDAY

Experts Speak at Milton on Water, Sewerage System

Milton—The proposed public water and sewerage system for Milton was discussed pre and con Tuesday night at a citizen's mass meeting. Speakers from all over were A. E. Smith, mayor of Vilas, Wisc.; C. M. Baker, sanitary engineer for the state board of health, and W. A. Kiehoffer, hydraulic and sanitary engineer engaged by the local village board.

The Virginian, mayor spoke enthusiastically of the system in his own town, which has proved a success despite the fact that holes for sewage disposal had to be drilled through solid rock. A similar system should prove equally feasible, he said, with a plentiful deposit of gravel through which to filter the sewage. Mr. Kiehoffer and Mr. Baker exhibited lantern slides showing plans and estimates for the local system and also pictures of systems in other towns and cities. Frank Holmes was chairman of the meeting.

A village election to decide the water and sewerage question probably will be held Tuesday, March 6.

TIME TO TAKE IN THE WHOLE STATE.

It seems high time we looked over the situation in Wisconsin seriously and out of the chaos of class antagonism got together in a program for the whole state and stopped fighting over selfish interests. That goes for all classes. We have three separate antagonisms—the farmer demanding legislation which will give him an advantage over someone else; labor demanding regulation which will temporarily aid it, and the manufacturer and business man either fighting both or attempting to secure other advantages which in the end will be to his benefit, but to the detriment of someone else. It is unnecessary to attempt to say where it all began. Part of it is chargeable to the demagogic appeal to the ignorant and unthinking and prejudicing the public mind by placing all business and industry in the ranks of protection, tax dodging and the making of profits to the hurt of others. There are too many people in Wisconsin who are saturated with the belief that anyone who has succeeded, has done so by crooked methods and has been cheating the government out of its dues.

Another part of the situation comes from labor desiring to legislate archaic and obsolete methods into operations, wipe out the use of machinery for processes and obtain specific advantages.
Then the farmer feels that he has not been given a just amount of the legislation which is his due and that he should be exempt from many of the applications of statutes in levying taxes and the operation of his business, as against the laborer and the industrial side of affairs. Then, too, there is the doctor of the old schools who wants to regulate every healing process out of existence excepting his own, and the person who proposed a law on every subject in a desire to regulate something which may have irritated him or his neighbors, from the size of potatoes to the hul-sling of shoes.

Of course all these may be covered by the words "distrust" and "selfishness" and self-concerning of attention to one's own particular affairs.

Take the unemployment insurance bill. It is a new and untried act of legislation. Economists do not agree about it either as to its form or its operation or application. It is not a political question and should be outside the governmental pale, also it should be national, if at all, and all employment be on an equal national basis. But we leap into it all with eyes blinded and make it a sine qua non of political faith and progress. Men can honestly differ on this question. Labor union men do not agree on it. The farmer who has been led to support it is waking to the fact that his own labor market will be curtailed seriously if the bill becomes a law as presented to the Wisconsin legislature. So also we have tax bills. Frankly they are aimed at the rich and thrifty. They do not hurt the laoter, the spendthrift or the ne'er do well. They pretend to strike the rich—that's the demagogue side—they do hit the consumer and the farmer in the final analysis. They have been drawn as one-sided affairs without consultation with the interests most affected. Those interests on the other hand condemn without deep investigation, use denunciation instead of argument, and fail in making the fight against system, rather than symptom. Part, too, of this taxation program is the result of the repeated denunciation of all industrial leaders by demagogues and bunkshooting politicians, who in most cases have never made a study of a single economic phase, of either taxes or government. And then the ever-present antagonism by industry toward any attempt to get together with the advocates of the tax bills in the hope of a better understanding, has worked as a factor in the widening of the gulf until we have two forces aligned. Between them the state of Wisconsin is a No-Man's land, to be devastated just as was North France, lying between two armies in 1918.

It is perhaps useless to appeal to the men in the saddle at Madison. They have a program of legislation which is based on the false premise that all economic ills can be regulated by statute.
Add to that a desire for revenge on some industries headed by persons who are not pleasing to prejudiced legislators and a further factor of socialistic theory honestly believed in by a number of others, and it is perhaps impossible to get very far toward sanity.

But there ought to be a halt in the rank and file of labor when confronted with suicidal legislation—legislation that will eventually eliminate the job or act as an estoppel against any additional industry designed to absorb and use more labor.

The farmers of the state of Wisconsin would never be a dollar out if no single bill introduced supposedly in their behalf, were to become a law. So, too, with labor and industry. There is not a law which would add ten cents to the wealth of an individual or group. That's the pity of it all—the futility of that uneconomic legislation.
But on the other hand there is much legislation in the 1000 bills before the committee, which will result in the loss of many a dollar from the pocket of all classes of activity in the state and much of it to the benefit of the office holder and the hopeful politician and job-seeker.

It is time to look at things in the terms of Wisconsin, to see the whole state and not a little patch here and there and a group of people here and another somewhere else. It is time also to let the legislature know how the people stand on the subject now that many things are concretely before us, and representatives should be informed of the attitude of the public in terms clearly set

THE CITY MANAGER—I

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Petersburg, Va.—When St. Paul said "I am a citizen of no mean city," he inspired many thousands of Americans in many hundreds of cities to express their pride in their own home towns, and may be said to have furnished a model for that characteristically American product, we know as "the booster." In hundreds of American cities the booster meets the traveler at the railway station ready to show him the sights and impress upon him the excellencies of "our town." But all too often even the booster has been quiet when the visitor has asked about the city government, and has been forced to evade direct questioning by an alibi: "You know how it is, these politicians get hold of the city government, and what can you do?"

That isn't true in Petersburg, and it isn't true in the great majority of the cities and towns that have adopted the city manager form of government. Here in Petersburg, and the same thing is true in other city manager cities, the local booster talks first about the city government and is proud of it, and tells what it has done, what it is doing, and what it hopes to accomplish, exhibiting quite as much pride in the municipal administration as in the fact that Petersburg is the biggest trunk and bag manufacturing center in the United States, or that it has the largest export cigarette business, or that it has an extraordinary wealth of historic lore.

It may be worth while to outline the history of this newest movement in municipal government that in so many places has changed not only the government itself from a happy-go-lucky plaything of the politicians into an efficient business administration that is the pride of the people.
The form of city government in America, speaking generally, was imported from England along with the English titles of mayor and alderman and councilman. Until the democratic revolution led by Andrew Jackson in the second decade of the nineteenth century the English model was deemed sufficient, but then, while the form was retained, the suffrage was extended and the mayor who had been selected by the aldermen became an elected official and the administrative head of the city became enmeshed in the coils of practical politics. The cities grew tremendously in population and in number, and "city politics," often was synonymous with corruption and dishonesty.
So generally was the truth of this unhappy condition recognized that when, in 1886, James Bryce wrote "The American Commonwealth," he felt compelled to say that municipal government was the one conspicuous failure in American life.
Thirty years later the same great commentator, then Viscount Bryce, found himself unable to change his mind, but he did say that the new experiment of the city manager offered hope of changing this one conspicuous failure into a success.

The new form of government is modelled upon that most typically American organization, the business corporation. The voters are stockholders.
They elect the members of the council or the commissioners, who are the directors. These directors control the policy of the corporation and they select a city manager who is the general manager of the corporation; the executive head of its administrative affairs. The machinery then functions just as does the machinery of any private business corporation.

The first departure from the essentially traditional form of city government in America came as the result of the great Galveston disaster when a tidal wave engulfed a city, drowned thousands of people and destroyed millions in property. The old government was not able to cope with the situation and a committee of business men took over city affairs. Their administration was so successful that at the next legislature the city obtained a new charter and the Galveston plan, or the commission form of government, was adopted.

Under the commission plan the people choose a small number, usually three or five, commissioners.
These collectively form the legislative, or policy-making body of the city, while severally each is the head of a particular branch of the administration—commissioner of finance, commissioner of public works, and so on. The plan was improved upon by Des Moines, and was hailed as the hope of the cities. It was adopted by more than a hundred cities and in nearly every instance, so say those who have carefully examined the records, resulted in marked improvement in municipal administration.

But it was soon found out that the people, in voting for commissioners, voted for representatives in the legislative sense, that is, for the men who thought as they thought, and not for persons peculiarly qualified for administrative work. Thus it would happen that in one election a banker would be elected commissioner of public health, and a banker commissioner of public finance, and both would attempt to conduct their offices while carrying on their private business. Then, also, the commissioners tended to become jealous of their administrative departments when sitting together.

Another disaster and another change—huge sections of the city of Staunton, Va., began dropping into the subterranean cavern beneath the city. The government was inefficient. The council recognized its own limitations and employed Charles E. Ashburner, a civil engineer, to be business manager of Staunton. He succeeded and the city manager form of government came into being.

Later Mr. Ashburner became the city manager of Hickory, N. C., which was the first city formally to adopt the new system. Then he went to Springfield, O., where he was manager for three years, thence he came back to Virginia where he is now in his fifth year as manager of Norfolk, the first, the oldest in point of service, the highest salaried city manager in the country. Norfolk pays him $16,000 a year—a thousand dollars more than New York pays its mayor.

Still another disaster—the impounded waters of the Miami river break their bounds and pour down a destructive flood upon the city of Dayton, O., which forthwith became the first big city to employ a city manager—H. M. Waite.

That was the beginning. From 1908, when Mr.
Ashburner began in Staunton, until 1918, the growth was slow. During the past six years it has been very rapid. Now more than 300 cities and towns have adopted this new system.

Its distinguishing feature is that, while the voters control the legislative machinery and the policy of the city, through their elected councilmen, the council carries out that policy through a city manager, who is a trained man, nearly always brought in from another city, and that the city manager has no other business or concern than the executive direction of the city's affairs.
Tomorrow—The City Manager at Work.

It may be claimed that the people decided this last fall, but the cold dawn of a February day may look much different from a hot September morning.

Recent studies have shown that collapse of a lobe of the lung commonly precedes the pneumonia which is known as "the paper pneumonia" a kind of stagnation of the blood in the lower parts of the lungs and, if such happens to harbor virulent pneumococci, as in some low grade chronic nose, throat or bronchial trouble, they are quite likely to have pneumonia.

My Grandpa and Grandmamma

My Grandpa wore whiskers that reached to his waist.

My Grandpa was wrinkled and serious-faced,

He walked with a stoop and a shuffle was his,

For he always complained of "the dam-rheumatiz."

He smoked a cob pipe that was ancient and strong.

He was snoring at eight for on sleep he was long.

My Grandmamma knit mittens and sat by the fire,

As she knitted as prim as the Baptist Church she knitted.

Her hair was in ringlets; she wore a lace cap.

A mountain of darning, reposited in her lap.

When grandpa was not feeling quite at his best

She made him yarb tea and she greased up his chest.

Now the grandpa and grandmamma were out every night.

To some cabaret or a pinocchio night.

My Grandpa's crosscut like the wallpaper sets.

And his jacket the cootrot and smokes cigarettes.

My Grandmamma mirculed and she drives her own car.

And her skirts are in style as her grandmamma's are.

Old age is old-fashioned and has passed away.

You wouldn't know grandpa and grandmamma today.

Maybe Turkey's initiation fee will keep the poor old league out of the poorhouse for another few weeks.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTER.

Pandora Nicholson is so very shy that meeting people, especially with her mother, is a positive painful experience. She lives as a "poor relation" with her aunt Nellie and Uncle Peter and their son, the popular Gladys, her own mother, gentle, whimsical, restless, impractical, lives and works there too—all of them in the little town of Glendale.

Pandora told her she is not good, that she becomes more shy and self-conscious. She makes only one friend, Marion Newbold, an only child, who loves her deeply for his friendliness to her. Then Gladys, who has her choice of all the boys in the town, decides that Pandora is the best.

Gloria Gates, an interior decorator from New York, whom she had met, now looks after her little son, Frankie. Pan begins to find herself in love with Gloria, who loves him deeply for his friendliness to her. Then Gladys, who has her choice of all the boys in the town, decides that Pandora is the best.

Just when her shyness was most acute, the alarm became calm. She was visiting the bookshop at Glendale. And the misery departed as suddenly and inexplicably as it had come, and she sat up, feeling very foolish, and very much ashamed. Other passengers were doing the same, past unhappiness still in their glazed eyes.

And just as instantly as they had suffered limp wrecks, the various passengers began to smile and revive, and when they were through the customs, they went chattering into the station restaurant and ordered lunches and wine.

"I never thought I'd want anything to eat again," Pan remarked as she ate breakfast and upbraided herself.

"Yes, it's the worst thing in the world, it's more acute than a toothache or a broken heart," Gloria said lightly. "It's worse, of all, because it has no element of tragedy. It's only a joke, but dreadful while it lasts."

Paris, Gloria had one of her sudden attacks of economy and put them all in a tiny hotel—one, it happened, where she knew the proprietress, a chubby old lady who welcomed Gloria as a daughter and Frankie as a lost grandchild, telling him in soliloquy that she last saw him in his mother's arms. She would be delighted to look after him while the ladies shopped.

Then struck a cold wind on the Channel, and a rough choppy sea. The train people who had started off so gaily on a delightful morning, became transformed suddenly into half-bearded looking terrors, the huddled under their shawls, who lay back in limbo attitudes and seemed the last word in misery.

Even Pan, who had not had a touch of sea sickness on the ocean, started to the women's lounge at George's suggestion, where she lay on a chaise longue and stared un-

Gassy Stomach

Bloating, Belching, Sour Risings, Heartburn, Pressure—Be Sure To Use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Chew one or two after meals or any time and note how the stomach settles down, feels fine, stops gas, acidity, sour risings, belching and such troubles due to indigestion. Then continue to use them. You'll notice the tablets are perfectly useless. She could not even understand the chubby Madame Rolland when that lady spoke very slowly. As for the conversation on the streets, it was a mad jumble of syllables. "Your mother knows what they're saying, though," she observed sadly to Frankie, after the physician had come to the door, and not knowing a word of his answer. "Mother knows every language," I suppose."

He believed it. For Gloria, if she was a bad mother according to Norris City standards, had accomplished the impossible which few mothers achieve, and the Norris City type mothers never at all—she had made a great beloveling in the eyes of her small son, Gloria was the most lovable, fascinating, amusing and dazzling of personages to the child—a feeling he was to carry all through his life.

Then followed an alkaline effect—and you need have no fear to eat whatever you like. Get a 50c box today of any druggist. No more drowsiness or heavy feeling after a heavy meal. And you get the benefit of your food in more solid flesh. Most people have a tendency to acid, gassy stomach just after eating or drinking coffee, etc. In Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are shown in this time of neutralization the acids, your stomach is sweetened, the gas is prevented and you feel good all over. Try it. Remember you can get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets anywhere in U.S. and Canada. Advertisement.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married man, of 22 and have a wife of 18. We have been married a year. My wife is very beautiful. She has beautiful hair and eyes and is very attractive. Once, to this she was very fond of me, with different manners. I have a nice roadster and I never denied her the privilege of driving it. While I am at work she often takes the car out alone. Several times I have found cigarette stubs and other things which have convinced me that she has had company along with her. When I am at home, however, these things are only girls angry and I feel that that is all the trust I have in her.

I am very much in love with my wife and can hardly bare these things. She seems very affectionate toward me but still I feel doubtful.

One evening when she took the car out for a walk was gone for some time and afterward found that she had been to a dance.

We have no children but we have often talked on the subject. She seems not to approve. Do you think she is doing the right thing?

We have a nice home and everything to make things comfortable and pleasant for her. Why is she so discontented? I have even thought of leaving her, but care so much for her and she seems to follow me, and yet she does things which make me very doubtful.

DOUBTFUL HUSBAND.

Naturally you do not get any particular pleasure in buying gasoline to drive other men around. Since you feel your wife cannot be trusted with you, however, do you feel that it would be better to leave her? I think, however, that if your wife is deceiving you, she will continue to do so and sooner or later there will be a break between you.

Perhaps you are not doing all you can to make your wife happy.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a constant reader.
